'How amiable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts'

Psalm 84.1

As a Diocesan Advisory Committee, we give thanks often for the work and witness of the church buildings of the Diocese of Carlisle, recognising their value and significance in testifying to the gospel in our communities, as custodians of our shared history and heritage and as places where God can be known, experienced and encountered.

Together they form a fundamental and very special part of the shared spiritual, historical, ecclesiastical, social and cultural life of Cumbria. And we give thanks for all who give their time, effort and resources to ensuring that they continue to be places and spaces of significance across our county.

As such, we are very grateful to all the contractors around the Diocese who help to maintain our buildings, and especially to the Architects and Surveyors who are detailed on this attached list. They do a very important job in advising us and ensuring that, within the resources available to us, we do our utmost to preserve and look after our buildings. They deserve not only our gratitude but also our prayers for the work that they do for the ministry and mission of God across Cumbria.

The DAC is required to keep an approved list of Architects and Surveyors who are appropriately qualified to undertake the Quinquennial Inspections of our church buildings, which is refreshed and updated every five years. So, inclusion on this list indicates that the Committee have been involving in checking that they are qualified for the task that is entrusted to them. However, it is important to note that this does not necessarily serve as a guarantee of quality of work, or indeed a recommendation from the DAC. It is not our place or position to give such guarantees or recommendations.

In some situations (particularly when the building is Grade I listed) PCCs appointing Architects should be looking for additional specialist qualifications, and so may need to ensure that the Architect is a qualified Conservation Architect.

The appointment of an Architect or Surveyor is a key decision for the Parochial Church Council and there are two separate documents available about this (one shorter and one longer). But, in the hope that is helpful, here is a summary:

- the Archdeacons are happy to support PCCs in making these appointments.
- you may also wish to consult neighbouring PCCs – in your Mission Community, Deanery or even more widely in the Diocese – about their experience.
- you may wish to ask several Architects or Surveyors or their practices to tender, by submitting portfolios of their work, and then coming to interview.
- the PCC appoints a specific Architect or Surveyor, not the practice.
- the cost of Quinquennial Surveys may seem high to small parishes but most Architects report that they do not make money on doing them – overall they are doing us a favour rather than the other way round.
- the key factor in appointing an Architect or Surveyor is a good professional relationship between PCC and Architect or Surveyor.

With every good wish and prayer,

The Reverend Andrew Norman
Chair of the Diocesan Advisory Committee
